▲ BREAK UP A SET Since this is where we spend the most time on the porch, I wanted it to feel layered and less pretty-pastel. The wicker chairs were in great shape, and I was able to save some cash by keeping them. I considered replacing the white wrought-iron sofa, but it felt quintessential cottage to me, so I didn't mess with it. I replaced the glass coffee table with a feet-up-friendly option and brought in a sisal rug and rope lamp to warm up all the white. The Hudson's Bay point blanket is something I bring up every summer — it's perfect for cool nights, not to mention an Instagram picture here and there! Rug, West Elm; coffee table, side table, Wicker Emporium; table lamp, HomeSense; linen pillow covers, Ikea.

Switch in all the newly upholstered cushions

< CHANGE THE FABRICS I chose nature-inspired fabrics that would age well and be in keeping with the cottage's rustic-trad charm. They're from Robert Allen's Sunbrella line so they will stand up to wet bathing suits and sun. I had the cushions sewn professionally and upholstered the sofa base myself in a fabric that nods to the sofa's floral past. Pillow sewing, Tonic Living.
